

How is my classroom culture learning-friendly and how are my students responding?

I coach whenever possible, I tell only when necessary

I am shifting responsibility for monitoring to my students

I talk with my students about the learning process

I use 'Could-Be' language whenever possible

I build learning behaviours into lesson / activity planning

I use Visible Thinking Routines to support my students' learning

I have re-defined many common notions of classroom learning

I create displays that support independence and celebrate learning

I have rarely attempted this

I have tried this now and again

I regularly do this in my classroom

This is an embedded feature in my classroom

My students have yet to respond to this culture shift

My students are beginning to respond positively to this culture shift

My students are responding positively to this culture shift
