

How do my students react to my Constructing Learning classroom culture? My students . . .		The majority of my students are like this	Some of my students are like this	Few of my students are like this	Almost none of my students are like this
Linking content and learning	. . are unaware of the learning behaviours they need to employ
	. . are beginning to understand how they need to use the 4 key learning behaviours
	. . understand which learning behaviours they need to use to access the content
	. . are beginning to understand the required fine-grain learning behaviours from the progression charts
	. . are able to make their own decisions about which learning behaviours will be required / successful
Challenging activities	. . are able to access a curriculum that is heavily scaffolded
	. . are beginning to enjoy accessing more challenging activities
	. . are expanding the range of strategies they possess to tackle challenge
	. . are becoming familiar with a wide range of activities with differing levels of challenge
	. . enjoy open-ended, challenging activities
Building reflection	. . prefer me to do the reflecting for them
	. . are beginning to take a degree of responsibility for reflection
	. . reflect on how they have been learning
	. . take time to monitor their learning as they go along
	. . accept the challenge of planning, monitoring and evaluating their own learning
